About the Minor Football League

The MFL was created in 1993 and since then the league has continued to blossom. The league has distinguished itself from other leagues in the fact that it is a professional league, not "semi-pro." The Washington Chiefs, the league's first team has become the most well-known franchise. The MFL has since expanded throughout the United States with 32 teams. The MFL will be comprised of eight divisions with four teams in each division. Divisions were created based upon geographic region.

The Minor Football League provides a competitive platform for young athletes to compete in the game of football, while also serving as youth mentors and community service representatives after completing their secondary education and/or college degrees.

The MFL will begin play the first week in June and the postseason will run through August. The MFL follows a 10-game schedule, with five home and five away games for all teams. Each division champion, will send a team to the playoffs. This season will also highlight an MFL All-Star game. The MFL championship game will be played in Washington, D.C.
